Learning Budget Policy

This policy, issued by Firm HR on 1 July 2026, explains the annual learning allowance available to every employee in financial year 2027: how much you can spend, what is covered, how to get approval and how to claim. It applies from 1 July 2026 to 30 June 2027.

Allowance

Each full-time employee has a learning allowance of $2,000 per financial year. Part-time staff receive the allowance pro rata. Unused allowance does not carry over. Staff who join part-way through the year receive a prorated amount.

What is covered

- Courses, workshops and conference fees, including online programmes.
- Professional certification exams and one retake where the first attempt is unsuccessful.
- Books and learning subscriptions related to your role or development plan.
- Travel to a learning event, under the Travel and Expenses Guide.

What is not covered

- Degree programmes, which follow the separate education assistance process.
- Memberships that are not tied to a certification.
- Equipment, hardware and software licences.

Approval and claiming

Agree the learning with your manager and record it in your development plan. Spend above $500 needs manager pre-approval in line with the Expense Policy Summary. Submit the receipt within 30 days. Time spent on learning is booked to the development code and is limited to 40 hours a year unless your manager agrees more.

Repayment

If you leave within 12 months of the firm paying for a certification or course over $1,000, part of the cost may be recovered. The Learning team confirms the amount before you enrol.
